“Losing My Mind”: The beautiful Tanis delivers an important message...

Tanis has just come out with a new song and music video. A lovely message of peace encouraging environmentalism and that we learn to live together.

Following on from “Ce N’est Pas Moi” (Its Not Me) where she made a passionate declaration of love to her sweetheart, the beautiful Tanis now brings forward an environmental message. With “Losing My Mind”, Tanis shows the extent to which she is affected by the wars and environmental disasters that man produces; it is a heavy message that she delivers with a frail voice.

Tanis' commitment to environmentalism stems from her many travels across the globe. Inquisitive, the young woman has ventured from Indonesia to Greenland. She grew up in six different countries across which she took note of growing climate change and instability.

Her diverse interests have a profound impact on her musical world. Throughout her compositions she doesn't hesitate to mix her many influences, as such her work emerges as a rich and colorful universe that recalls meaningful encounters, new horizons and multiple passions...

Like an alarm or a cry of despair, "Losing My Mind" carries the following warning: "Our planet is sick, soon the damage will be irreparable, but we can still save it, if we act now!". Her EP Blackout will come out this summer.
